CARTHAGE & ROME

Three wars that determined
the history of civilizations

The basis of all cultures and civilizations is considered to be the Roman Empire and later the Byzantium one.

What kind of influence has influenced the European peoples all over the world is well known. However,

THE ROMAN EMPIRE MIGHT NOT EXIST.

WORLDWIDE ADVENTURES
THE HISTORY CLUB
since 2018

SYMBOL OF ROME

At the very beginning of its rise, Rome faced a terrible and, perhaps, the most dangerous enemy - Carthage. It was not just a confrontation between two states, a struggle for existence.

"Carthage must be destroyed!" - the famous slogan of the Romans, which in the meantime became a proverb denoting something that must be done no matter what and how. The reasons why the Romans were well aware that if Carthage was not destroyed, then Rome would be destroyed.

It was a struggle for dominance in Europe and Asia Minor, and the loser would simply disappear. Inside were equal forces. Yes, and these two cities were founded at about the same time - Carthage in 814 BC. and Rome in 753 BC.

They also approached their heyday at the same time - by III-II centuries BC. The collision was inevitable and it happened. The confrontation lasted for almost a hundred years (264 - 146) and resulted in three wars - the famous Punic Wars.

CAUSES

These two city-states achieved success along the shores of the Mediterranean Sea and both were aggressive from the very beginning and by the 3rd century they had made serious progress. The element of Carthage was the sea and it was Carthage that almost completely controlled the Mediterranean Sea and all shipping, both commercial and military.

And Rome rose on the Apennine Peninsula, which by the beginning of the 3rd century colonized all of Italy under its rule. However, for further growth, they needed the sea and there was Carthage.

The collision was inevitable and lasted almost a hundred years. And both sides wanted it. The German writer and playwright Bertolt Brecht very accurately described what happened there, although he was not a historian:

*"The great Carthage fought three wars.
After the first one it still remained
a great power,
after the second one it still existed,
after the third one it was destroyed."*

Bertolt Brecht
